V. Reasoned statement under Rule 66.2(a)(ii) with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability; citations and explanations supporting such statement

1. STATEMENT

Novelty (N)	Claims 1-72	YES
	Claims NONE	NO
Inventive Step (IS)	Claims NONE	YES
	Claims 1-72	NO
Industrial Applicability (IA)	Claims 1-72	YES
	Claims NONE	NO

2. CITATIONS AND EXPLANATIONS

Claims 1-72 lack an inventive step under PCT Article 33(3) as being obvious over Pinsley et al (USPN 6070143) in view of Harrington et al (USPN 6161099).

As per claims 1-72, Pinsley et al disclose a survey system via the internet, wherein the consumer computer requested information about the advertiser's (i.e., requester) product or service, thereby disclosing receiving a request from a first user to leave feedback about a second user; generating a set of predefined feedback comments to be displayed to the user, each predefined feedback comment of the set of predefined feedback comments being associated with an indicator; identifying a predefined feedback comment from the set of predefined feedback comments as having been selected by the first user; and storing an indicator associated with the predefined feedback comment in a data structure associated with the second user, wherein the set of predefined feedback comments relate to an online transaction for at least one of goods and services.

Pinsley does not disclose and auction or a second language. Harrington et al disclose an auctioneer provided via a web site (figure 1) and a verification page 50, including a list of questions that must be answered (i.e., survey, medium 8, lines 44-50). In addition, a second or multiple languages would be a logical progression of the Pinsley system, since the internet is worldwide. Both Pinsley and Harrington disclose interactive websites, including surveying users, therefore it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include the online surveying in Fuerst facilitated by an auction, as seen in Harrington, thereby increasing the robustness and flexibility of the Fuerst system.

Claims 1-72 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(4), and thus have industrial applicability because the subject matter claimed can be made or used in industry.
